"The campus is situated 25 miles north of Boston, Massachusetts, in Lowell, a city of nearly 100,000, long famous as a textile center and more recently for its increasingly diversified industries. The 29-acre campus, situated on both sides of the Merrimack River, includes 13 main buildings, among them an auditorium-administration building, a library which is currently being greatly enlarged, six classroom-laboratory buildings, four residence halls and a gymnasium. A $4,500,000 nuclear science center is now in operation." (From 1970-1971 catalog)

Dormitory facilities are available for about one-quarter of the male students.

Evening/Correspondence Courses
Although a few evening courses are available (mainly in Education), the University does not offer complete degree programs in the evening. No correspondence courses are offered.

CERTIFICATE OF ADVANCED GRADUATE STUDY
The School of Education conducts several programs leading to the Certificate of Advanced Graduate Study. These are not degree programs. These programs call for a minimum of sixty semester hours of graduate work beyond the bachelor's degree, of which at least thirty must be taken at the University and of these at least fifteen must be taken in the School of Education. Of all the course work leading to the Certificate at least eighteen credits must be 700-900 courses. No credit is valid after ten years. The final thirty credits must be taken within a four year period.

All fees and expenses must be paid before the Certificate will be conferred.

"Perhaps the most exciting developments at SMTI during the past several years have taken place on the new campus under construction on a wooded 730-acre site in North Dartmouth. The campus will integrate ruggedly handsome buildings, designed by architect Paul Rudolph, within a functional master plan.... The first classroom building, housing programs in the humanities, social sciences, business administration, and fine and applied arts, was completed and occupied in September, 1966. A science-engineering building is currently under construction and shall be completed within the current academic year. Further facilities for textile technology, an auditorium, administration building, library-communications center housing computer facilities, research center, student union, gymnasium-natatorium and dormitories are scheduled for completion within the immediately succeeding years."
